09/667802

ABSTRACT

To provide a module for data writing/processing into a database in a manner so as to maintain compatibility of data between tables, even when customized data is included in a table. The module for writing data is equipped with both a data

5   writing/processing functions group corresponding to the customization, and a writing means for simultaneously updating both a customizing region and a core region in the database memory on a disk.

27